Congratulations for being in one of the best engineering schools in the country! Joining one of the most accomplished peer groups in the country comes with some potentially unforeseen hardships and obstacles. You might be struggling with classes or need help with registration and course planning. You might not have the proper study skills. You might be far from home, family, and close friends. You might have come from a small town or a different country and don't yet feel at home on campus. You might have test anxiety. You might be unsure of whether engineering is the right major for you. Perhaps you feel a little lost, unsure, unmotivated, and not even sure why. We are here to help! Stop by and seek advice. After all, even the smartest and wisest of us can learn from others.

You can also stop by just to talk, to learn more about the different resources available on campus, or just to make sure you're on track to graduate.

Our advising offices are here to help. We help you figure things out by talking it through with you. We are advocates and an excellent campus resource. If we don't have the answer, we know whom to refer you to.

Sincerely,
The College of Engineering Advising Staff
